The Anthropocene as a new phase in Big History

April 3, Wednesday, 6:30 pm EST

The International Big History Association is pleased to announce an online conversation between two distinguished figures in the field of Big History: the esteemed historian and IBHA founder David Christian and the Anthropocene advocating geoscientist Emlyn Koster, respectively an emeritus professor at Macquarie University in Australia and a director emeritus of the Royal Tyrrell Museum in Canada. Daniel Barreiros, associate professor at the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and president of the IBHA, will be moderator of the event. They will discuss their nuanced perspectives on the profound global challenges arising from what is increasingly recognized as a potential new human age in Earth history. Please join us for an intellectually stimulating session where insights from diverse disciplines converge.
